UNPRECEDENTED POLITICAL LANDSLIDE SWEEPS LAURIER FROM POWER AND SHOWS BEYOND DOUBT THAT CANADA DOES NOT WANT RECIPROCITY

A very pleasant and enjoyable goose banquet was given on Monday evening at the Park Hotel by the proprietor, L. P. Hussey, in honor of his friend, Charles Hughes of Alliston, Ontario, who has been visiting here for the past week. Covers were laid for fifteen, the guests including Mr. Hughes and several citizens. The tables were laden with all kinds of seasonable relishes and was greatly enjoyed by those present.

After the banquet, which continued for an hour or more, short toasts were responded to by several of the guests, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hussey were voted splendid hosts and royal entertainers. The gathering broke up about 12 o'clock.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC AWARDED GRAND PRIX AT LONDON FESTIVAL

"The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has received a cable from London that the Grand Trunk and G. T. P. had each been awarded the Grand Prix at the Festival of the Empire and Imperial Exhibition now in progress in London.

"The building for which the prizes were given contains, besides many exhibits of game, views of the popular resorts in the east, and also a large amount of space has been given over to exhibits from the west, including grains and grasses. Thousands of people have seen these exhibits, and much interest is being shown with the result that with the literature being distributed a large number of immigrants will leave for Canada in the next year or two."

The St. Clair Stock Co. with their troupe of 14 people will be at the Opera House next week. You will get your money's worth.

Reserve all dates for the St. Clair Stock Co. Undoubtedly the best troupe of players yet visiting the town. At the Opera House beginning October 3rd. and continuing until October 7th.

ST. CLAIR STOCK CO. HERE ALL NEXT WEEK

The St. Clair Stock Company open a week's engagement in the Auditorium Theatre, beginning Tuesday, October 3rd. Their opening bill will be the great three act pastoral drama by Daniel Sully, "The Parish Priest". This Company has just closed a summer stock engagement at Edmonton, and comes to Wainwright highly recommended by both press and public. Mr. Richard Scott in the role of The Parish Priest, has been featured in the part with numerous Pacific Stock companies, and Miss Mabel Cullen, leading lady of the Bush Temple Stock Co. of Chicago, has played the part of Nellie Whalen with Daniel Sulley's own company. The other members of the Company are equally well cast, and between the acts, specialities of a high class nature will be introduced, featuring Miss Pearl Vohl and Master Robert St. Clair. Each and every bill produced during the week, is equally as strong as The Parish Priest, and on Wednesday night, an unusual feature will be produced after the last act of the play, in the way of a bona fide marriage on the Stage to which the audience are cordially invited to remain and witness. This is the first time in the history of Wainwright, that a real marriage ever took place on the stage. The bridegroom is Mr. Roy Haag, and the bride elect, Miss Pearl Vohl, the soubrette. Prices for the entire week. General 50cts., Reserved 75cts., Children only 25cts. Reserved seats now on sale at the Opera House.

ERRATUM

A short time ago it was stated in the STAR that Charles Wakefield, who was visiting his brother Robert for a few weeks last summer, had leased the Clark Manor Farm owned by J. G. Clark east of Irma. The information was given out by Mr. Wakefield himself but is now disputed by Mr. Clark, who states that no such transaction took place.

It has been proven beyond a doubt that the Canadian people are not in favor of legislators making agreements with foreign nations of such importance before consulting the country. The humiliating defeat of both Paterson and Fielding has proven this conclusively.

In the near future, the conservatives of the town will reorganize and form an association. That formed previous to the election appointed officers pro-tem. Announcements will follow in the near future.

Greatest Turnover in History of Dominion Politics Places Conservative Party in Power by Large Majority -- Fielding and Paterson, the Authors of Reciprocity, together with Five Other Cabinet Ministers, Slain in the Fray -- Douglas Has Big Majority in Strathcona.

LAURIER WILL NOT RESIGN

By a veritable political landslide and the greatest turnover in the history of Canadian politics, Laurier and the Liberal party went down to defeat on Thursday last. Unable to stem the popular feeling in Ontario, where the interests of the people would have been sacrificed by the ratification of reciprocity, Laurier lost twenty-two seats, giving the conservative party a total of 72, as compared to fifty at the last election. The result of the polls showed most emphatically that Ontario holds the balance of power and can dictate in whatever manner will be to her own welfare, regardless of the other provinces. In the slaughter, several ministers of the old cabinet went down to defeat, including Fielding and Paterson, the authors of reciprocity. In every province of the Dominion, with the exception of the prairie provinces, the conservative party made pronounced gains. The maritime provinces turned down six former liberals and added conservative candidates to the list. Quebec, which has always been regarded as the stronghold of Laurier from the fact that it is his home province, [illegible] gains, and pronounced [illegible] in favor of the pact. [illegible] province, it is satisfying to note that Bourassa, the exponent of Nationalism, was given a severe turn down. Of the twelve candidates in the field, two were elected, including Monk, Bourassa's right hand man.

Such an overwhelming defeat means that when the twelfth session of parliament meets, the Fielding-Knox reciprocity agreement, ratified by the American Senate, will not be introduced. The conservatives are committed to a policy whereby the trade of the empire will be expanded with closed doors to the United States. The Canadian people showed in no uncertain manner that they no not wish to sever their connections with Great Britain, with the change of annexation by the United States. They demonstrated that loyalty to the old flag was to be desired and that the ties between the Mother Country and Canada were still strong.

The task now falls upon the shoulders of Borden to form a cabinet and call parliament in the immediate future. It is thought that Sir Wilfred Laurier will tender his resignation in the course of a week and after certain matters in the [illegible]. It is probable that the House will be in session in a month or six weeks.

In the Strathcona constituency, James M. Douglas, the reciprocity candidate, was returned with a majority of 2,300, Wainwright giving him a majority of 38. In almost every poll, Mr. Douglas received a majority, although Sydenham, Edgerton, Black and Ribstone in the Wainwright district gave Campbell comfortable majorities. In the home towns of both candidates they were defeated by large majorities.

The returns were received here at the local Opera House, the STAR announcing the returns as they came in over the G. T. P. Great exultation prevailed on the part of the local conservatives as the returns were bulletined. Liberals however, took the defeat good naturedly and for a long time, with their great surprise, refused to believe that Laurier had been finally rooted from power. Probably the most pleased man in the town was George Hudson president of the local conservative association, who worked throughout the campaign with unfailing effort. The result in Strathcona, however, was expected, although it was not thought that Douglas would be returned with any such majority. His triumph, nevertheless compares favorably with those of the other Alberta candidates, who fought for reciprocity.

SIR WILFRED ON THE ELECTIONS

"There is no doubt that we have been decisively defeated," declared Sir Wilfred Laurier after he had heard the returns from the election. "I gladly lay down the premiership, a burden which I have carried for fifteen years. We believed that in making the reciprocity arrangements we had done something which would be a great benefit to the people of Canada. The electors have decided otherwise, and I bow to their decision. I regret that we have been unable to carry reciprocity, which I still believe would have promoted the material advancement of Canada and would have promoted the growing friendship between the United States and Great Britain. However, the country has spoken, we must bow to the inevitable, and I cheerfully do so."

FRIDAY DANCE

The Hall management will again give a dance on Friday evening in the Auditorium, commencing at 8.30 P. M., sharp and continuing until 12.30. From the success of the first dance, given by the management two weeks ago, it is expected that a large number will attend. $1 per couple.

$10.00 REWARD

W. S. Goulet.

BORN—On Saturday, September 23rd., to Mr. and Mrs. H. W. McLeod, a daughter.

A weekly mail and postal service will be inaugurated in the next few weeks between Hardisty and Wainwright, the route being by way of the Buffalo Park. The Alberta Livery Co. will have charge of the service and will also carry passengers and express between these points.

OFF TO BRANDON ON HAPPY MISSION

Mr. Benjamin Covey left on yesterday's eastbound for Winnipeg on a happy mission. After visiting there for a few days he will go to Brandon, where on October 4th, he will wed Miss Ethyl Brock, formerly of Wainwright and well known here. The ceremony will be performed in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the popular couple, after which they will leave for Montreal and Chicago on an extended honeymoon. Mr. Covey was accompanied by his brother, William, who will act as best man.

Purchased for Good Reason

From the advice of W. P. Hinton, General Passenger Agent of the G. T. P., C. F. Kohl of New York City arrived here last week to look over the district with a view of purchasing. Although, he landed with a pricelist of lands, selling at much smaller figures than these here, he finally purchased from the Wainwright Realty Co. the S. E. 15-46-6 at $16.50 per acre. Mr. Kohl has travelled over a large section of the West and states that one of the strong seasons for his purchase lay in the fact that the water in and around Wainwright is of such excellent quality.

Nyal's tooth powder and paste is the best, Once used, always used. 25 cents at the Wainwright Pharmacy.

Mrs. Arthur Scoffield and family arrived here from Winnipeg on Friday last to join Mr. Scoffield, who has been here for the past two months. They will reside on Third Avenue.

WIRE CUT AS RETURNS CAME

Although the returns, received by the Star at the auditorium on the evening of the election were to a great degree true, the service after nine o'clock was very unsatisfactory. The wire that had been installed was monkeyed with by some smart individual and necessitated the messages being carried from the despatchers office to the hall and there announced from the stage. Great indignation was expressed by those, who had come to hear the results, when it was announced at 10.15 that the service was at an end. While it lasted, however, the faithfulness of the operator, W. H. McLeod, was worthy of much praise.

W. S. Clark and S. McPhee left for the East on Thursday last. Mr. McPhee will enter the Toronto University for a course in dentistry, while Mr. Clark will proceed to his home in St. Ola, Ont., where he will visit his former home. Before returning, he will be one of the principals in a happy event, returning here after a short honeymoon in Ontario.

FRESH MEAT FOR SATURDAY POST TO CHEW ON

The first impression, gathered from the advertising, already started by the National Townsite and Colonization Company in the sale of their sub-division south of the town and recently purchased from Harry Limpert and John Connell, would indicate that the same tactics are to be employed as were started by the North American Bonds Limited, in the disposal of Central Park. The life of this latter company was a short one, although it was nevertheless eventful, due to a large degree to the strenuous opposition offered by several eastern publications, chief of which was the Winnipeg Saturday Post.

Saturday's issue of the Winnipeg Free Press, contained a full page advertisement of this new sub-division, portraying of course in its introduction, the remarkable developments made by Wainwright. A booklet has also been issued by this company with no small amount of printed matter, illustrated throughout with cuts of certain buildings in the town.

It would be useless to dwell upon certain inaccuracies in this booklet and expanded facts that are distasteful to the citizens. It is thought that on account of no investigations having been made by the company, they are misinformed, but, with the progress of their sale and the realization that the investor, who contemplates buying Wainwright property must be fully satisfied with what he is buying and where it is located, the company will eventually employ a more direct and reliable system of advertising the town. If this is not done, the campaign will form an exhaustless supply of matter for similar articles to those of the Winnipeg Saturday Post in regard to Central Park.

LOCAL SCHOOL CAN NOW BOAST OF 70 NEW ATTENDANTS

As an illustration and proof of the rapid strides being made by the local educational institution, under the capable and efficient management of Principal McLean, it is surprising to note that at the present time, there are more than one hundred and twenty-five pupils in attendance with the roll increasing daily as compared to fifty-five at this time last year. Three teachers are now presiding over the different departments, averaging more than forty scholars in each. It is evident that the staff will shortly be increased by the addition of another teacher in order that the school may obtain the best results.

MAYOR PAWLING GIVES REASON FOR MIXUP IN BY-LAWS

TO THE RATEPAYERS:

Having been questioned to a considerable extent, concerning the action taken by the council in regard to the re-voting on the by-laws in connection with the street work, firehall etc., I might say in regard to the above matters that on a slight technicality, in each of the previous by-laws, prepared by our solicitor, the Ontario Security Co. refused acceptance of the bonds, so in that event, we thought the most advisable plan to pursue would be to follow up the course, upon which we are now acting, and again submit the by-laws in their proper forms, relieved from all technicalites to the ratepayers. I would like it distinctly understood that the council are in no way responsible for the delay, and are acting in such a manner as to facilitate matters to such an extent that the public will lose but little by the delay.

H. Y. Pawling, Mayor.

International Stock Food is the BEST. The only place you can buy it in town is at the Wainwright Pharmacy. adv.

The new cylinder press, ordered by the STAR has arrived and will be set up this week. After this is done, subscribers can look forward to a paper that will, we believe, be a credit, to the town and district.

George Hudson, who has taken such an active part in the conservative cause in Wainwright, was a passenger to Edmonton on Monday.

Chicken season opens on October 1st. In view of the fact that the first day of the month comes on Sunday, the following day will see many local sports adjourn to the surrounding localities. Chicken are very plentiful although grouse are not in evidence as much as last year.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson

CHAPTER XIII.

IMMEDIATELY following Kirby's dramatic declaration Adele had given a little cry and promptly fainted, while her brother attempted another ineffectual assault upon his enemy. With difficulty he was bundled out of the room by Aaron and M. Veaudry before blood was shed, Kirby being in no humor to stand further insults from his accuser. Then Adele was escorted from the room by old Mammy Lyna, Croup's wife, while Judge Pleydell repaired to the balcony and dismissed the patiently waiting posse.

Unwillingly the posse dispersed, some even returning to New Orleans, while the indefatigable old judge retired indoors and sought his three friends, leaving Kirby and Bunce in undisputed possession of the ground floor.

"Well, gentlemen," began Pleydell in a businesslike voice, "there is only one thing to be done, and that is to adhere to our original plan. It is no time now to deplore our mutual blindness. The fact remains that that d—d low gambler has claimed the plantation, as we expected, though I admit he took an unlooked for and devilish roundabout method of doing so."

"If I had had any help he wouldn't be here now," interrupted Tom Randall sullenly, glowering at Aaron and M. Veaudry. "I'll fix him yet!"

"Not you alone, but the four of us," corrected Pleydell, "and we'll give him a fairer chance than he deserves. In the meantime, Tom, you must control yourself and keep out of his way until the ladies have left the house, for no violence must be indulged in in their presence. Your poor sister has stood about all she can bear, I reckon, though I'm glad she discovered in time the true character of that designing villain"—

"You mean to insinuate that he dared to pay his addresses to Adele?" cried Tom, springing to his feet in a fresh access of fury.

M. Veaudry laid a restraining hand upon his arm. "It is that I do not think Mr. Kirby has acted as other than a gentleman to a lady," he said pacifically, glancing significantly at Pleydell.

"Gentleman!" sneered young Randall. "As if he knew the meaning of the word! But if he had dared to address Adele I would go down now and"—

"You must learn to control yourself, sir," interposed the judge, somewhat testily, irritated at the boy's mad outbursts. "I think you can safely leave the honor of the family in the mature and capable hands of your cousin. You have misinterpreted my words," he added, ignoring the other's shrug at the mention of Aaron's supposed abilities, "for Anatole is quite right. Mr. Kirby evidently has one virtue—he knows his limits—and your sister is not one to be impressed by such a character even if masquerading under such an honorable name as Colonel Moreau. To return to the real theme, is it agreed, then, that we adhere to our original plan?"

As Tom sulkily refused to speak, Aaron asked gravely: "You mean that the ladies go to your plantation, Judge Pleydell, while we remain for the ostensible purpose of formally handing over the estate to—to that man? The ladies are to be kept in ignorance of our real purpose?"

"I'd shoot him and be done with it," sniffed young Randall. "He'll slip through your fingers again—see if he doesn't."

"Yes, the ladies are to be kept in entire ignorance," agreed Pleydell, ignoring the boy's observation, "likewise Mr. Kirby and that fat scoundrel who accompanies him—no warning, mind, for they are desperate characters who hesitate at nothing. Miss Adele will naturally abhor the idea of remaining under this roof one minute longer than is absolutely necessary. To complete our ostensible purpose inform the servants we are leaving, never to return, and let Miss Adele pack up and take with her such things as belonged to her mother and upon which this scoundrel can have no legal claim. By the way, we must assume charge of Colonel Moreau's portmanteau, with such effects as it may contain. It is our duty to inquire if he left any next of kin and to return his belongings to them. Poor gentleman—so honorable, chivalrous and courageous. I regret that I had not the extreme honor of meeting him while he was yet living."

As, in quest of the portmanteau, Aaron entered the deserted drawing room Kirby, pacing the balcony, hailed him from the window.

"Mr. Randall, if you think that excitable young cousin of yours is ready to listen to me there's something I've got to tell him," he said quietly, mastering his irritation.

"It is our intention that you shall see him, sir, as soon as the ladies have gone," replied Aaron, with a significance lost on the other.

"When the ladies have gone?" echoed Kirby, entirely without comprehension, for he had never contemplated such a move.

Mr. Randall nodded.

"Mr. Kirby," he said coldly, "in their sense of honor to the dead man who lost this place to you his children do not oppose your possession. But you can scarcely imagine they would be willing to pass the night under this roof once you had claimed it."

Without comment Kirby returned to the balcony. He looked old and careworn, for the words had stung him to the quick. Twice within the past hour he had sent a request for an interview to Adele, and as yet she had made no answer. This, then, was the explanation. Evidently he was deemed too unclean a thing even to look upon. He did not greatly wonder, for he could never efface the memory of her horrified look and cry when the mask had fallen and the bad prince stood revealed. After all, the penalty for his remaining had been immeasurably greater than he had anticipated.

Meanwhile Aaron had bent over the portmanteau, which still lay open upon a chair as Judge Pleydell had left it. In searching for Colonel Moreau's Derringer the contents of the suit case had been somewhat disarranged, and the methodical Aaron now withdrew a badly crumpled coat, intending to fold it neatly before replacing it. As he did so a red morocco box fell from one of the pockets. Aaron, about to return it, suddenly started and held it under the light of an adjacent lamp, for the inscription on the lid which had arrested his attention was: "Margaret Randall to her husband, John Randall."

"Margaret Randall—that was Adele's mother," he exclaimed in wonder.

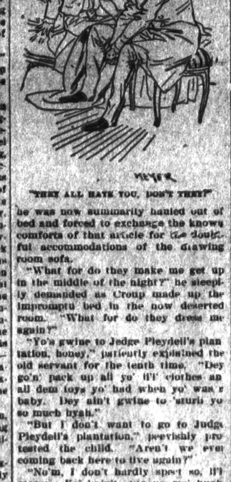

"What is that?" asked M. Veaudry, entering the room and noting the other's interest.

"Something that fell from Colonel Moreau's portmanteau," replied Aaron, opening the box and examining its contents. "You see, it is the miniature of Adele's mother that that gambler won the night he won the plantation," nodding to the balcony where Kirby could be heard pacing back and forth. "You know he got even my poor cousin's jewels. This is set with diamonds. Look—half of them are gone."

"To the pawnshop, eh?" ventured M. Veaudry. "Yet you found it in Colonel Moreau's portmanteau! It is very strange. How has it come there?"

"No one knows but Colonel Moreau, and he can't answer anything now," said Aaron solemnly. "You better give this box to Tom."

Like his older brother, the General had proved an unwilling participant in Judge Pleydell's maneuver. The child strongly disapproved of the idea, for he was now summarily hauled out of bed and forced to exchange the known comforts of that article for the doubtful accommodations of the drawing room sofa.

"THEY ALL HATE YOU, DON'T THEY?"

"What for do they make me get up in the middle of the night?" he sleepily demanded as Croup made up the impromptu bed in the now deserted room. "What for do they dress me again?"

"Yo's gwine to Jedge Pleydell's plantation, honey," patiently explained the old servant for the tenth time. "Dey go'n' pack up all yo' li'l' clothes an' all dem toys yo' had when yo' was a baby. Dey ain't gwine to 'sturb yo so much hyah."

"But I don't want to go to Judge Pleydell's plantation," peevishly protested the child. "Aren't we ever coming back here to live again?"

"No'm, I don't hardly spect so, li'l marse. Yo' kain't stay no mo' hyah, honey, an' ole Croup kain't go nowah wif yo' all's no mo'. Ole niggah got a new marse now. Yo' must sleep, honey. I wake yo' when dey ready, li'l' marse. Hesh, honey, hesh!" And Croup lightly tiptoed from the room as the General nodded drowsily and then closed his weary eyes.

And thus Kirby found him. As if conscious of the other's gaze, the boy instantly awoke with a start and sat bolt upright, throwing off his impromptu covers.

"I've got to have a talk with you," he said gravely. "No; I won't go to sleep, and if you leave I'll get up. I want some more light. I'm going to have some things the way I want them."

Recognizing that flight was useless and that the child was in deadly earnest, Kirby obediently turned up the lamp.

"It strikes me," he said mildly, "you'll come very near getting a good many things the way you want them."

"You come and sit here," peremptorily ordered the General, pointing to a stool beside the sofa. And again the man obeyed. For a moment the child was silent, gravely contemplating his pseudo hero. "What is a 'd—d low gambler?'" he suddenly inquired.

"It's what some people call me," replied Kirby after a pause. "I'm sorry they do it before you."

"They don't like you any more, do they—specially Dele? They all hate you, don't they? I know why. It's because you turned out to be the bad prince," said the boy, nodding solemnly.

Again the other was silent. "General," he said at length, "there's something your sister never got quite straight in the stories she's read you. Sometimes the good prince is half bad, and sometimes the bad prince—is half good."

"No; there was never anything like that in the books," reflected the General, greatly surprised.

"And sometimes," added Kirby, "they are both just one man—half good and half bad."

"Both just in one person?"

"Yes. And when that person—half good prince and half bad prince, remember—gets into a mysterious underground passage, say, and the adventure takes him to where the people are good, why, then he tries to be all good too."

The child pondered over this truth, little comprehending those strange contradictions and complexities of the soul, of that dual personality which has mystified older and wiser heads than his, that has baffled sage and scientist alike and will baffle them to the end of time.

"Then are you trying not to be a bad prince now—not any more at all ever?" he finally asked.

"Not where you and your sister are," said Kirby, his voice trembling.

"But you'll turn out bad again when we go away?" suggested the child.

"I don't know just what will happen then," confessed the man, staring dully at the floor.

Silence came. Then the child sighed. "I'd like to know the end of that story."

Although no herald of intrusion had been apparent, he was suddenly conscious that some one had entered the room before the General had expressed his wish. Rising, he discerned Adele Randall, who now came swiftly forward and, ignoring him, assumed a protecting attitude over the child, as if to shield it from an infinitely contaminating presence. She appeared the same as on the first occasion of his meeting with her—pale, and dressed entirely in black, hopelessly emotionless and uncompromisingly hopeless.

"Miss Randall," he ventured at length, ignoring her attitude, "I have something for you. Several times I have sent one of the servants to you requesting an interview. I don't want you to regret all your life the fact that you refused to listen to me."

Without a word or a glance she turned to the General and took him by the hand, the child struggling with all his small strength. "Please don't make me!" he implored. "Dele, he's trying not to be bad like they said. And, don't you remember, I promised to be his trusty friend. Can't I even talk to him?"

"Miss Randall," quietly interposed Kirby, "there isn't a slave on this plantation you wouldn't listen to if he asked to be heard before you punished him. Won't you"—

But she had gone, half carrying the still ineffectually struggling General. Kirby remained grimly eying a slip of paper he had withdrawn from his pocket. It was his last card—the deed to the plantation. Throwing it on the table, he sank into a chair, a prey to the most hopeless dejection.

Facts About Motherhood

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at the time of child-birth, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when the strain is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

It isn't as though the experience came upon them unawares. They have ample time in which to prepare, but they, for the most part, trust to chance and pay the penalty.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy, and strong.

Any woman who would like special advice in regard to this matter is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. Her letter will be held in strict confidence.

Itching Eczema's Cause and Cause

THIS DREADFULLY TORTURING AND OBSTINATE DISEASE IS ENTIRELY OVERCOME BY

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Eczema is common to rich and poor, old and young, and is neither contagious nor an indication of uncleanness, as some suppose.

Teething, improper food, indigestion, vaccination, poisoning by clothing or from ivy, etc., are named among the causes.

There is inflammation, redness, heat, swelling, discharge, formation of crust, and all the time annoying, troublesome itching and burning, which often becomes so torturing as to be almost unendurable.

This ever present [illegible]ng is what makes eczema so dreaded, and it is this feature to which Dr. Chase's Ointment gives relief from almost the first application.

Dr. Chase's Ointment is not only delightfully soothing, but is a wonder as a means of healing the skin. It is not long before the raw, itching sores are thoroughly cleansed, the itching subdued and the process of healing begun. Persistent treatment will then bring about a thorough cure.

This great ointment is always beneficial to the skin, making it soft, smooth and velvety, and, besides being the most effective treatment known for the cure of eczema, is useful in every home in a score of ways. Mothers use Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing and skin troubles of their babies in preference to unsanitary pore-clogging powders; 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Put Him in Wrong.

Robinson, having tacked down the new linoleum in the kitchen, retired to bed, leaving, as thoughtful husbands often do, his hammer and nails strewn about the floor

And lo! in the early hours of the morning Bill Sikes and a friend forced the kitchen window. "Take your boots off," said Bill, "and git in."

Off came the boots, and Samuel stealthily crept through the window. A few minutes passed when suddenly Bill received a blow in the eye from his pal.

"What's the matter?" gasped Bill. "Didn't you tell me to take my boots off?" answered Samuel.

"Yus, I did; but you're wasting time. Wot's the matter. Wot's the point?"

"Point," was the snarling reply. "I'm blooming well come to it. This 'ere crib ain't a 'ouse; it's a bloomin' tin-tack factory."

"Dr. Deepsearch is a wonderful man. He has discovered over thirty new diseases." "Can he cure them all?" "Oh, no; he leaves that for someone else to do." — Boston Transcript.

MOONEY'S BISCUITS

ONE TIRED WOMAN AND ONE LITTLE OVEN

You have probably been there yourself—perhaps are right now.

Bright women all over Canada are getting away from this. They welcome MOONEY'S BISCUITS as a most acceptable substitute for their own bread and biscuits.

MOONEY'S PERFECTION SODA BISCUITS

are the crispest, creamiest crackers made. Better still, they are baked in Winnipeg; right at your very door. They come to you fresh as the product of your own oven.

You can have them in air-tight packages or sealed tins as you prefer.

LET MOONEY DO IT

Publicity Better Than Suppression.

A committee representing the American Academy of Medicine urges that the newspaper publication of suicides be prohibited on the ground that such publication has a sinister influence, tending to encourage further suicides. "Suicide is a private affair, anyway," says the committee; it's none of the public's business.

No one will be inclined to question the psychological effect upon the readers of suicide news. It is unfortunate, of course, but perhaps no more so than would be the suppression of this kind of news. For it sometimes takes publicity to determine the difference between suicide and murder. Even with wide publication of the known facts, it is doubtless true that justice is some[illegible] through the natural error of believing that the murderer's victim took his own life. The opportunity of error would be immensely increased were news of this kind withheld from the public.

As in the matter of suicide, so in that of crimes of varying degree and character. Bank robberies suggest further bank robberies; stories of arson tend to repeat themselves. On the other hand, even deeds of wisdom and valor furnish an incentive to emulation.

Where could the line be drawn, or where should it be? In the main, publicity is much safer than suppression. —Winnipeg Telegram.

To a cripple, whose experience of life has included tramping in parts of Canada and the United States, Premier Asquith, of Great Britain, has awarded a civil list pension of $250 in consideration of his literary merits and inadequate means of support. He is William H. Davies, whose volume of poems, published in 1905, entittled "The Soul's Destroyer," attracted much attention of literary London.

No publisher would accept his work, and Mr. Davies printed the book at his own expense out of his savings as a street hawker. Three years later his "Autobiography of a Supertramp" was a sensation of the year, but the author does not seem to have made great profits from it, for he is at present living in a cheap lodging house in Southwark.

Other persons granted pensions under the civil list include $500 to William Butler Yeates, the Irish poet; another of the same amount to Joseph Conrad, and $575 to Mrs. Davidson, the widow of the poet, who drowned himself on the Cornish coast.

The editor of a country paper in Iowa always impressed upon his assistants the necessity of exercising caution in the statements of events. That one man finally learned the lesson was indicated one day, when he handed in the following: "When Samuel Parker entered his house one day last week, he found that a cow, probably astray, had made her way there from the open door."

Faint?

Have you weak heart, dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals? Or do you experience pain over the heart, shortness of breath on going up-stairs and the many distressing symptoms which indicate poor circulation and bad blood? A heart tonic, blood and body-builder that has stood the test of over 40 years of cures is

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

The heart becomes regular as clock-work. The red blood corpuscles are increased in number—and the nerves in turn are well fed. The arteries are filled with good rich blood. That is why nervous debility, irritability, fainting spells, disappear and are overcome by this alterative extract of medicinal roots put up by Dr. Pierce without the use of alcohol. Ask your neighbor. Many have been cured of scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever-sores," white swellings, etc., by taking Dr. Pierce's Discovery. Just the refreshing and vitalizing tonic needed for excessive tissue waste, in convalescence from fevers or for run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people. Stick to this safe and sane remedy and refuse all "just as good" kinds offered by the dealer who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing will do you half as much good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

CORONATION

IMPORTANT NEW DIVISIONAL CENTRE ON THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Offers Absolutely the Most Attractive Investment and Business Combination of the Year in Western Canada.

CORONATION is the First Divisional point east of Lacombe. Engineers are now locating two branch lines north and northwesterly from Coronation and a third line is projected southeasterly to connect with the branch running northwesterly from Swift Current. As a Divisional Junction, Coronation is bound to rapidly become one of the most important distributing and commercial centres on the great new railway route from St. Paul to Edmonton. An early train service is assured as track will reach Coronation from the West before date of sale.

DO you want to make a safe and profitable investment? You can do so at Coronation. This is a business announcement to business men. Coronation lots should quickly double or even treble in value. The amount of business waiting to be transacted at this point is enormous. Don't overlook this opportunity. If you are looking for a highly profitable business opening, you cannot do better than select a location at Coronation. If you cannot attend the sale yourself instruct your representative to act for you.

As an agricultural market centre alone, Coronation is bound to develop, as the farming country in the vicinity is of the highest quality and well settled, but with the additional advantages to Coronation as a Divisional and Junctional centre, its rapid growth is a certainty.

Lots will be Offered for Sale by Auction on the Site on Wednesday

September 27, at Low Upset Prices. Easy Terms of Payment.

SINGLE FARE FOR THE ROUND TRIP from all points between Winnipeg and Calgary to Castor, from where a special train will run to Coronation. This is a splendid opportunity to see some phases of Western growth. Accommodation, meals, etc., provided at the townsite. Combine business with pleasure. This trip will prove one of your most profitable and pleasurable excursion.

Write to-day for Illustrated Bulletin, Map of the Townsite and Full Particulars of Sale. Let us know if you wish accommodation reserved.

Farmers Ask that Surtaxes be Levied on Land Held by All Speculators

At the last monthly meeting of the U. F. A. several matters of importance to the farmers were discussed. The matter of the new Local Improvement Act to be passed by the Alberta Legislature was taken up and it was decided to send the following recommendations to the central: That U. F. A. 260 (Wainwright) in reponse to your request per seggestions would urge that,—municipalites be enlarged to comprise at least sixteen townships; that the act governing municipalities be made to conform in so far as possible with the present Saskatchewan Act; that instead of the present system of uniform taxation a system of taxation recording to land values be introduced and that the Councils of local municipalities be empowered to levy a surtax on all lands held solely for speculative purposes. Reports regarding the securing of the present Athletic Association grounds for Agricultural Association purposes was discussed.

It was also decided to ask the G. T. P. to enlarge the present loading platform so as to accomodate at least three cars, to make the platform paralell with the track and to lessen the grade of the present approaches. A letter urging immediate action in this matter has been sent to the general superintendant together with a request that a lower minium be allowed on car lots of grain. A communication from the Deputy Minister of Agriculture promising to address the association at an early date was also read, and arrangements will be made accordingly.

May Declare Holiday for October 4

Edgerton's Fall Fair will be held next Wednesday, October 4th. It is probable that a half holiday will be given by the businessmen and an adjournment made to the neighboring hamlet by a large number of citizens who feel that Edgerton in its efforts should be encouraged with their patronage and support. Prize lists are now in the hands of Secretary William Grieve from whom they can be obtained on application.

Great interest has been displayed in Edgerton's first fair and unusual preparations made towards holding a successful exhibition. The directors and officers are capable men who will undoubtedly bring the fair to a successful ending. It is satisfying to see that the people of the village are so energetic in their efforts, at the same time showing the people of our own town and district that they do not intend waiting for the larger centres to take the initiative.

The announcement given out on Friday last that Campbell had been elected by a majority of twelve produced very noticeable results. The songs of joy on the part of local conservatives were loud and long. When it was found, however, that Douglas had been sustained by such a large majority the results were exactly reversed.

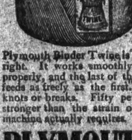

Reports from points on the Edmonton-Calgary branch of the C. P. R. last week state that several inches of snow fell. The fall here was very light.

THE VERY LATEST SAYS NITRAMA

Did you hear what's the latest now?
Why its actually selling rhyme
The "Aid" of the Methodist Church
Keeps working away all the time,
Sometimes they sell bread, cakes and pies
Or something to answer the same,
But now they're making acrostics
Just for twenty five cents a name.
Some say it is going too far,
For to ask anyone to buy
Such things as they do have to sell,
But some of them think they should try.
They say it is money they want
For to pay off a big church debt
And they want to keep at it still,
Expecting to pay it off yet.
As long as they get it honest
They should sell whatever they can,
And ask the good hearted public
For to help them through with their plan.
We heard they were doing quite well
And pulling the debt down fast,
We hope they'll have courage enough
To keep at it up to the last.
The Merchant tries to sell his goods,
No matter what the public say,
The Ladies Aid should do the same
And keep right at it every day.

EIGHT CATHOLIC CHILDREN NEED HOMES IN ALTA.

The Department of Neglected children at Edmonton are looking for homes for eight Catholic children. Annie, a little girl aged eight, a particularly attractive and bright child is anxious for a home in some good Catholic family. Frank, her brother, aged four years and a half, an equally attractive boy, is anxious for a good home in a Catholic family where he will have a chance to grow up as a good man. Joseph, aged nine, a good Canadian, with the looks and manners of a gentleman, should be an acceptable boy in some good Catholic home. James, aged twelve, is anxious to get a chance to make his way in the world. Another Joseph, aged about seven and a half, a particularly handsome boy who is anxious for a good home and who will more than repay investment of the good Catholic home who is willing to give him an opportunity to become a man. A home is also wanted for Lewis, aged three years and a half and for John aged two. These are all Catholic children who are under the care of the Department because of the fact that they are either orphans or because their parents are unable to properly care for them. Applications for these children should be sent to the Superintendent of Neglected Children at Edmonton.

It should be remembered that the applicants must have good homes and that the children must be desired for their own sakes before they will be allowed to go to foster homes. The best homes in the country are none to good for these children who come from nice people and who are well qualified to grace a place in any home.

IRMA'S SECOND ANNUAL FAIR BIG SUCCESS

Irma's Fall Fair was held on Friday last and although coming on the day after the Dominion elections was successful in every way. The exhibits were many, and far better than the average at country fairs. Many had exhibits of wheat that were easily worthy of No. 1 grades, while the other grains were of an exceptionally high class. Several exhibitors were present from Wainwright and even points east, all displaying a great interest in Irma's third annual exhibition.

Travellers, who happened to be in town on that day, stated that the exhibition much resembled those held in Ontario and the larger centres of the East. Much credit is due the officers, executive and committees for the excellent showing made.

Linen Frocks for All Occasions

Pale Pink and Braid Trimmed

An Outing Suit in Black and White.

Eyelet Embroidery on Light Blue

LINEN, in fine and coarse weaves and in all the colors of the rainbow, is a fabric of which we never grow tired and which combines practical features with modish effects to such an extent that the use of it is always sensible.

Since this fabric is so generously supplied with good qualities, it is not surprising to find that linen frocks are being shown that are suitable for all occasions. In simple little morning dresses, in elaborate afternoon frocks and in all types of suits it is the material par excellence.

A combination of deep-blue linen with a brighter blue braid and net is shown in the morning dress. The kimono blouse is trimmed with a plastron of braid and buttons at the front, and the lower part of each sleeve is of coarse net edged with bands of linen. A pierrot ruffle of net finishes the top. The skirt is a plain, gored pattern with a deep hem effect.

Beads and Irish lace trim the white linen dress for afternoon wear. There is a high waist line, above which lace is set in points. A double row of crocheted buttons trims the front, and a simple running design is worked on the top in white porcelain beads. A stitched, slashed tunic is placed over the elaborately beaded and embroidered underskirt. Large lace motifs are scattered over the lower part.

For an attractive plain-tailored suit the black-and-white one is recommended to your notice. The jacket is short, and at the underarm seams there are triangular insets of striped linen trimmed with pearl buttons. A broad "shawl" collar of striped linen is used, and the coat is tied together by a soft black ribbon. The treatment of stripes is repeated on the skirt.

For occasions when the tailored suit is not appropriate the pale-pink linen suit is suggested. The short jacket is trimmed with deep-pink braid and edged with white ball fringe. A military effect is suggested by the braid ornamentation. Motifs in white and pink are used on the circular skirt at the bottom.

Eyelet embroidery is the main trimming on the light-blue linen afternoon frock. The yoke is of circular strips worked in eyelet and the embroidery design extends over the sleeves and in points at the front. Blue enamel buttons are used to decorate the front and the sleeves and a narrow belt is edged with linen cording. This model is effective in black-and-white or in two shades of any color. The eyelet work is so simple that you can apply it in a very short time.

Another model is very elaborate in its trimming of heavy braided net bands and its motifs of dark braid. It is of cool buff linen and the lace is dyed to match. A square-cut top is edged with lace and an extended shoulder line is defined by bands of lace. This same net is used on the underarm seam of the blouse and extends on the skirt below the belt. Braid in a deeper yellow is worked in a conventional design on the bodice and tunic.

Last is a convincing alliance of linen and hemstitched voile. The skirt is cut with a high line that gives a bib effect. A panel at the front is trimmed with buttons at the knees. The bodice is built on the favorite peasant-blouse pattern, each tuck being hemstitched. White braid and buttons form the trimming.

Be wise and choose in time.

MRS. BOWSER had seen for two or three days that Mr. Bowser was worrying about something, but she asked no questions. It was at breakfast the other morning that he seemed to come to a sudden resolve and asked:

"Will you tell me the truth about something if I ask you?"

"Why, certainly," she replied.

"Am I considered a crank in this neighborhood? I want the truth, now."

"Well, yes. Some call you a crank and some a kicker."

"Then I'm not what you might call a favorite?"

"I don't think you've tried to be that. You are very blunt and brusque in your ways. You have chased our minister from the door; you have thrown agents over the fence; you have run peddlers down the street for a mile."

"Yes, I know."

"You have kicked to the grocer, butcher and baker until their delivery boys daren't come with stuff when you are home."

"Is it as bad as that?"

"And then you are always experimenting with the gas, some patent

"I see, my dear," said Mr. Bowser, with a smile.

"I know that you are all right and one of the best of husbands, but it's what other folks think."

"That's it—you are right. I've sometimes wondered if folks didn't think I was a little loose in the top of the head."

Chased Eye Peddler.

"It's just your little ways, I know, but other folks don't see them as I do. For instance, you were raking the grass in the front yard last evening and a man came along and wanted to sell you a glass eye. You could have simply shaken your head and let him pass on, but did you do so? No! You jumped the fence and grabbed for his collar, and he fell over a dog and two boys in getting away."

"Yes, and I was sorry for it afterward, Mrs. Bowser. The young man was respectful, and perhaps his whole future depended on how many glass eyes he could sell. I might have bought one to help him along and laid it away for the cat. No knowing what night he will lose an eye."

"I like hot popcorn, as you know, but you have got the old man who used to come along here so scared that he's afraid of his life. I've an umbrella with a broken rib, but the old mender no longer comes on this block. He remembers that awful yell you yelled at him last winter. Strawberries are here, but no strawberry man comes nearer than the corner."

Something to Be Done.

"I believe you have made a fair statement," said Mr. Bowser as he shoved back from the table, "and something is going to be done."

"But I hope you—you"—

"Please don't worry. I'm going to take a day off today and go around among folks and let them see I'm not the ogre they have taken me for."

"Oh, that's it. That will be nice. Just go around and be your real self for once and you'll remove the wrong impression. Yes, I'm awfully glad. It will surprise and please. You owe an apology to most every one."

"And they shall all have one. This is to be a new start for me."

A quarter of an hour later, after begging the cook's pardon for having thrown three of her young men outdoors in one week, Mr. Bowser walked forth. He thought he owed the butcher more apologies than any one else, and he headed for his shop first. The man of meat looked up and saw him as he entered and prepared for a row. Great was his astonishment, however, when a hand was held out for him to shake and the caller said:

Calls Butcher a Jewel.

"Jones, I dropped in to say you are the most honest butcher in the city. You are all right, and your meat is all right. You shall have my custom as long as we both live."

"Well, I'm glad you are satisfied," was the grateful reply.

"Satisfied? Why, I am positively delighted! You are a jewel. Say, Jones, I called you a liar and a robber a month ago. Forget it. I was a bit off that day."

"Sure I'll forget it. I knew you didn't mean it."

The next visit was paid to the druggist. He stiffened up to ask Mr. Bowser when he got out of the lunatic asylum, but he was headed off with:

"Say, Carter, you and I have had some sharp words now and then."

"Well?"

"No harm done, I hope. I always knew you were a good fellow, and I've always sent trade your way. Shake!"

"Of course I will. There's worse men than you, Bowser."

"I may have said that you didn't know enough to put up a prescription for a sick cat, but it was all in fun."

"Certainly it was. I may have said that if it wasn't for Mrs. Bowser you'd be sent to an idiot asylum, but that was one of my little jokes. Glad to see you in such good spirits, old man."

Brags on Horseradish.

The family grocery was just beyond, and the grocer was in the door. As he saw Mr. Bowser coming he called to the clerks inside:

"Stand on your heads now, for the old crank is coming!"

"Mr. Stevens, how do you do this fine day?" was the salute that jarred him.

"Oh, pretty fair."

"Glad to hear it. Keep it up. Say, you've been filling our orders splendidly for the last six months."

"Is that so?"

"No discount on that. Prices right and goods right. Not a delay of a minute. That last bottle of horseradish was way above the mark. Not a kick coming about anything. Send your bills right along every Saturday and they will not be disputed."

"You—you are Mr. Bowser?" haltingly asked the grocer as he looked the other in the face.

"Why, of course—of course. Dust in your eyes this morning? I am Bowser, and I say you have the finest stock, the best clerks and the most enterprise of any man in your line in town. Drop in some evening and have a game of euchre with me."

Plumber Does Not Listen.

The plumber was the next man on the list. He looked at the smiling phiz of Mr. Bowser with a cold glance. He was not a man to forgive.

"Look here, Smith, when you charged me $7 last winter for fixing a busted water pipe I called you a highway robber."

"You did."

"And I also said you were a liar."

"You did."

"Well, I am here today to say"—

"Get out o' this, you infernal old crank!"

And next minute the two were out on the walk and slamming away at each other for fair. A policeman came up and separated them and sent Bowser home. He arrived with a swollen nose and a bleeding ear, and to Mrs. Bowser's exclamations and inquiries he replied:

"Apologize! Good feller at heart! Want folks to like me! No crank! No kicker! No throw any one over the fence! You see it, don't you?"

And Mrs. Bowser saw that Bowser must be Bowser and no one else.

The Belles.

Oh, the belles,
Summer belles!
What a plenitude of heartaches their giddiness compels!
How they giggle, giggle, giggle,
In the sea breeze laden night!
How their victims squirm and wiggle
In an ecstasy of fright!
How they hurt
When they flirt,
When with ghoulish glee they gloat
On the squirming of a fellow when they have him by the throat!

Oh, the belles,
Brazen belles!
How they conjure, scheme and plan
To entrap the summer man.
The ribbon counter gentlemen who masquerade as swells!

Oh, the belles,
Greedy belles!
How they wring, wring, wring,
Soda water, everything,
From the pockets of those "Cash!" exclaiming swells!

Oh, the belles,
Foxy belles!
What a wealth of hints they fling
To compel the pleasant ring,
Diamond ring!
Ah, the heart engaging ring
Of the golden wedding bells, bells, bells, bells, bells!
Oh, the belles!

EARLY DAYS OF COACHES.

When Complaint Was Made That "the World Runs on Wheels."

John Taylor, an English poet, known as the "water poet," who died in 1654, had this to say about the use of coaches:

The superfluous use of coaches hathe been the occasion of many vile and odious crimes, as murder, theft, cheating, hangings, whippings, pillories, stocks and cages, for housekeeping never decayed till coaches came into England, till which time those were accounted the best men who had the most followers and retainers. Then land about or near London was thought dear enough at a noble the acre yearly, and a ten pound house rent now was scarce 20 shillings then. But the witchcraft of the coach quickly mounted the price of all things except poor men's labor and withal transformed in some places 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60 or 100 proper serving men into two or three animals—videlicet, a butterfly page, a trotting footman, a stiff drinking coachman, a Cook, a Clark, a Steward and a Butler, which hathe enforced many a discarded tall fellow (through want of means to live and grace to guide him in his poverty) to fall into such mischievous actions before named, for which I think the gallowses in England have devoured as many lusty valiant men within these thirty or forty years as would have been a sufficient army to beat the foes of Christ out of Christendome and, marching to Constantinople, have plucked the great Turk by the beard; but, as is aforesaid, this is the age when wherein the "world runs on wheels."

KEPT HIS MOUTH SHUT.

The Lady Guaranteed Silence, and She Made Good.

Unexpectedly an uptown pastor who encouraged congregational singing gained a new parishioner. Keen though his delight in hearing his people sing, there was one member of his flock whose endeavors he never encouraged. But the man sang without encouragement, much to the discomfiture of pew holders anywhere near him, who claimed that his loud, unmusical voice threw them out of time and tune.

Repeated complaints convinced the minister that somebody would have to assume the responsibility of silencing the ambitious singer. He decided that the man's wife was best fitted for the job. Owing to a difference in religious views husband and wife attended different churches, but the minister knew her, so he called and explained his predicament. She was genuinely surprised.

"Do you mean to say he sings?" she said.

"Tries to," amended the pastor.

She thought a minute. "I shall have to come there to church," she said.

"I shall be glad to see you," said the minister. "But what effect will that have on your husband's singing?"

The look she gave him was more significant than words, and they meant a good deal.

"John will never open his mouth when I am around," she said.

And John never has.—New York Times.

Easy to Identify.

A Chinese prince in this country visited police headquarters in New York and was much interested in the thumb mark records preserved there as a method of identification for criminals.

"We have used thumb marks for several thousand years as seals on mercantile and other papers," the Chinaman told the man in charge of the thumb mark bureau, "but we do not use them in any other way."

"How do you identify your criminals?" asked the thumb mark man.

"Oh, we have a very simple method of identification—we cut off their heads."—Saturday Evening Post.

Newfoundland.

In spite of ease and swiftness of communication we break down over the pronunciation of names that lie outside our front door. There is Newfoundland. Our earliest speculation in American settlers. But you can't pronounce it so as to satisfy everybody. A visitor has protested. The name has three solid syllables. One must win. In English mouths the accent is generally put on the second syllable, for the dogs found their day. That is wrong, quite wrong. But do you know whether you should say "Newfnln" or "Nfnland?"—London Chronicle.

Shooting Crocodiles by Lamplight.

In the West Indies crocodiles are often shot at night. The hunter, with a lantern, sits in a canoe in one of the creeks which the crocodiles infest. The crocodiles are attracted by the light and swim toward the canoe. Their eyes shine out in the darkness and form good targets for the hunter's bullets. Sometimes a dozen crocodiles are shot in a night.

Princess Juliana, Heir to the Throne of Holland.

The charming little lady shown in the illustration is Princess Juliana, only child of Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, or Holland, as it is often called. The father of the princess is Henry, prince of the Netherlands and duke of Mecklenburg. Queen Wilhelmina succeeded her father, King William III., in 1890, when she was but ten years old, her mother acting as regent until the young queen reached the age of eighteen. Princess Juliana was born April 30, 1909. She is heir apparent to the throne and may some day reign as queen.

The Parrot Scolded.

If parrots seem ill natured it is not always their fault. They say ill natured things, but they say nothing that has not been taught to them. So Mrs. Watkins' parrot must not be blamed for speaking ill naturedly to the burglar. The burglar got in Mrs. Watkins' house one night and was trying to steal something or other that Mrs. Watkins would have preferred to keep, and in looking around the house he woke up the parrot. You know how grumpy you feel if you are awakened before you have had enough sleep. It was just the same way with the parrot, and she scolded the burglar. She told him that he was a bad man and that he must get out, and the burglar, who did not know that it was a bird that was talking to him, got out as quickly as he could. He probably thought that he had been visiting a ghost.

A Doughnut Twice Cooked.

They had a fire in the window of a bakery in Boston. It started in an overheated doughnut—in the rim probably and not in the hole. The doughnut was a large affair, as much as a hungry small boy could eat in two seconds, and over it was a large magnifying glass, so that the small boy, if he should come along, would not bite off more than he could chew. He did not have a chance to try, because the sun got around to the window and shone through the magnifying glass on the doughnut, and pretty soon the doughnut got so hot that it burned. You know how such things happen, because you have probably burned your hands with magnifying glasses, but you did not have to have the fire department come to put out the blaze.

The peculiar tail is protected by small scales, but the under parts of the body and legs are covered with soft hair.

Origin of an Old Rhyme.

"Humpty Dumpty" was a bold, bad baron who lived in the days of King John, committing many cruel deeds in his strong stone castle, but at last was tumbled from power. His history was put into a riddle the meaning of which was an egg. The rhyme is more than 400 years old.

The Gift.

Fate gave a child these letters four
With which his lot to spell:
O-H-E-R, no less, no more,
The mystic letters fell.

The boy received them with a frown.
"Give me that hoe," he said.
"Fate dooms me for a drudging clown!"
For H-O-E-R he read.

"Fate's fault!" they cried. Fate smiled serene.
"Why blame me for his hoe?
With wiser eyes he might have seen
And spelled H-E-R-O!"

MUST CARRY GOOD WATCHES

Railroad Men Are Compelled to Use Accurate Timepieces.

It may be news to many that the watch of the railroad man is as necessary in modern railroading as the air brake. Without accurate time keeping there would probably be more accidents than if there were no air brakes. The train dispatcher starts a train at a certain time; he halts it at certain stations at certain times; he side tracks it for a period of varying length; the watch of the conductor on the side tracked train must agree with the watch of the conductor on the express to which he had to give way; each station master along the road checks the time of every train that stops or flies past.

In order that there may be agreement among all these railroad men there must obviously be not only timepieces, but accurate timepieces. There must also be some means of inspecting the timepieces to see if they are accurate and if they agree with some standard. The railroad man is therefore compelled to buy not simply an ordinary watch of reasonable value, but a particularly good watch, a timepiece which is adjusted to heat, cold and at least three positions. These three positions are pendant up, as carried in the pocket; dial up and dial down. Such an instrument will not vary more than thirty seconds a week, which is a good deal more accurate than many scientific instruments of precision used in laboratories. Even human proneness to error is considered in this matter of choosing a good railroad watch, for a lever set watch is preferred to the pendant set watch because there is just the chance that the stem of the pendant set may not be pushed back after setting through an oversight.

On one great line about 5,000 watches, worth on an average of $25 apiece (a low average), are used. If we take into consideration the number of watches that are used on other roads throughout the country it is evident that the value must run up into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In order that the watch may be kept up to a regular standard it must be inspected regularly. There is not only a general time inspector on most railroads, but a staff of local inspectors who are placed along the road at convenient points and to whom the men may resort when they wish to compare their time with the standard time at that place. Once every two weeks the railroad man submits his watch to such an inspector, usually a jeweler or watchmaker by profession.

The inspector gives his expert opinion on the condition of the timepiece. If it needs cleaning he says so and does it; if it is fast or slow he regulates it, and not until it is running with sufficient accuracy is it allowed to escape from his care. A watch's record is kept as if it were a thief. So far as repairing goes, the railroad man is under no compulsion. He need not hand over his watch to any particular watchmaker or inspector for repair, but he can give it to any watchmaker in whom he has confidence. It must, however, be submitted to the inspector before it can be used in actual service.

That no favoritism is shown in the matter of watches is evident in the fact that no less than eight different manufacturers supply railroad watches.—Scientific American.

Making the Chances Even.

In days when tavern brawls in England were frequent and swords were out on the slightest provocation common fairness demanded that the blades of chance combatants should be of equal length. In a sudden affray there would be no thought of measuring swords, so the authorities took the matter into their own hands at the gates of the city of London, where every gallant was liable to be challenged, and if the public official found any blade beyond thirty-six inches the smith stood by to snap off the steel to the required length. In Queen Elizabeth's reign this was the common practice.

A Sixtus V. Salad.

When Pope Sixtus V. was an obscure monk he had a great friend in a certain lawyer who sank steadily into poverty while the monk rose to the papacy. The poor lawyer journeyed to Rome to seek aid from his old friend, the pope, but he fell sick and told his doctor to let the pope know of his sad state. "I will send him a salad," said Sixtus and duly dispatched a basket of lettuce to the invalid. When the lettuce was examined money was found in the hearts; hence the Italian proverb of a man in need of money, "He wants one of Sixtus V.'s salads."

Jam For Breakfast.

People who like to eat pastry or other irregular dishes for breakfast should be consoled to learn that no less a man than Herbert Spencer ate strawberry jam at his morning meal. He did it to avoid monotony, believing that digestion was best served by keeping the stomach entertained with variety. He is said to have told of a man who went into a decline from a too steady diet of mutton chops.

RIDING THE BELLS.

Spectacular Feats of the Daring Ringers of Seville.

The ringing of a bell is not, as a rule, a performance particularly trying to the nerves, but there is one set of bell ringers the members of which must know no fear, for a moment of tremor would in all probability be for them the moment of death. They are the bell ringers of the Giralda, in Seville.

When the city is to make merry on feast days the ringers climb to the belfry, and then by the aid of a rope and steps cut in the wall of the tower each mounts to the bell he is to ring and stands astride the shoulder of the brazen monster. Then he presses the bell with his feet, holding on the crosspiece on which the mass of metal is swung.

Gradually the great bell sways to the muscular movement of the man astride it until it acquires a momentum that swings the hammer, first gently and then with increasing force as the sweep of the bell widens until the air is trembling from the giant blows that strike the massive sides of the monster.

The mere vibration of the atmosphere as the huge bells ring out would be enough to make an unpracticed ringer turn dizzy and fall from his perch. But this is not all, for many bells are ringing in the belfry at the same time in obedience to the movements of their riders, and the din is deafening.

Notwithstanding all this, the riders bend and rise and fall with the action of the bells, now appearing to the observer from below to be in a horizontal position as the bell reaches the limit of its swing and again riding gracefully to an upright position as the monster sways backward with another thundering note.

The most extraordinary part of the daring performance is the sight of a bell ringer calmly swaying the bell while it hangs far out of the belfry over the city, for the outward swing sends the counterpoise with the ringer into space beyond the arch.—Success Magazine.

HEIGHT AND WEIGHT.

Their Relation to a Man's Chances For Long Life.

The ideal insurance risk, from the point of view of height, is said to be from five feet seven inches to five feet nine inches tall. According to the National Fraternal congress, longevity and build have a close relation; the greater the variation in height from the above figure the greater the risk.

Brockbank says that tall men are not so long lived as their brothers whose heads are nearer to the ground. Men who are both tall and stout are not as good risks as stout men of medium or below medium height, says a writer in American Medicine. They do not bear acute illness so well, and accidents to them are likely to be more severe.

Risks over the allotted limit of weight are especially liable to diabetes, heart affections, apoplexy, gout, diseases of the kidneys and arteriosclerosis; excessive eating and abuse of alcohol are common among this class. It is stated that stout men under forty are worse risks than those over forty and under sixty, and that men who were unduly fat while they were boys are considered poor risks, especially if the tendency is hereditary.

Stout men are better average risks than their very thin brothers who are liable to tuberculosis and disorders of the nervous system. But for even the featherweight there is much consolation. He bears acute illness better than the heavyweight, and most of the people living beyond the allotted threescore years and ten are of light build. A slim, wiry, small framed man is said to be a better risk that a thin but big boned one.

Ore Deposits.

Men sometimes dream of enormous wealth stored deep in the earth, below the reach of miners, but experts aver that there is little or no ground to believe that valuable metallic deposits lie very deep in the earth's crust. Such deposits, it is said, are made by underground waters, and owing to the pressure on the rocks at great depths the waters are confined to a shell near the surface. With few exceptions, ore deposits become too lean to repay working below 3,000 feet. Nine mines in ten, taking the world as a whole, are poorer in the second thousand feet than in the first, and poorer yet in the third thousand.

Books were originally made of boards or the bark of trees, then of skins and parchments. Papyrus was used in Egypt. Vellum leaves were invented by Attalus, king of Pergamus, about 198 B. C. The most ancient writings are the Pentateuch of Moses and the poems of Homer and Hesiod.

The Outdoor Girl

Summer Exercise.

Success in most outdoor sports depends upon how well one can breathe. Breathing exercises are the most valuable. A reason for acquiring this habit in the summer is that away on the mountains or by the sea one can avail oneself of the purest, most highly "oxygenated" air obtainable.

Practice the following Yoga breathing: Close the left nostril and breathe through the right during eight seconds; close the right and exhale forcibly during two seconds through the left; inhale through the left during eight seconds; exhale through the right in two seconds.

It is highly important that the lungs should be filled with air in these breathing exercises and that the breath should be retained during the period in which we can count slowly from six to twelve. Then the exhalation should be gradual, say exhale, pause, count two, exhale a little more, count two, and so on. The muscles of the lungs will be strengthened and their capacity greatly increased in proportion as the air is first retained and then completely exhaled.

Breathe deeply at all times, but especially upon rising in the morning, and have the clothes loose enough to allow the ribs plenty of expansion. Pressure on the diaphragm makes violent exercise almost impossible.

Walking For Beauty.

Systematic exercise is an unknown quantity to many, yet it is as necessary to the development of a healthy body as is judicious eating. A brisk tramp taken in the right way will disperse depression and show one the joyousness of existence.

You can walk away from most ills of the flesh—bad digestion, bad circulation, liver troubles, anaemia and colds. Moreover, it is the finest thing in the world for the complexion, worth many visits to the beauty doctor.

At the end of an hour's vigorous tramp the skin fairly blooms with an exquisite ruddy glow that no cosmetics will produce. For the average person a daily walk of several miles, taken for the distinct purpose of exercising the muscles, with deep breathing to develop the chest, aerate the lungs and fill the blood with oxygen, is the best possible means of securing desirable results.

Take any form of exercise in the open air, especially the fresh morning air, for this acts as a tonic. Judicious exercise will improve the tissues, strengthen the constitution and add years to one's life.

Foot Ease.

Talcum powder sprinkled freely in the shoes will do much to alleviate foot weariness. There are various foot powders which are excellent used in this way, but when only a few necessary belongings may be carried in the traveling bag the talcum powder answers very well. The powder should also be rubbed over the foot before the stocking is donned. When the feet burn and ache cruelly after a long day of sightseeing a bath in cool water and a brisk rub with alcohol afterward will help them more than a soaking in hot water, which only makes them the more tender afterward. Each morning also the feet should be bathed in cold water and briskly rubbed to harden them and make them better able to resist fatigue.

When on the Steamer.

If you are crossing the ocean here are some suggestions for steamer etiquette:

Don't talk so all the passengers can enjoy your conversation.

Don't take strangers into your confidence.

For Tanned Skins.

A good summer lotion that will remove tan and soothe sunburned skins is made of three parts of witch hazel and one of alcohol. The alcohol coaxes out the fire from the burn, and the witch hazel keeps the alcohol from smarting. The lotion is delightfully cooling and soothing, and it keeps the sunburned flesh from stiffening and blistering. Wash it out thoroughly in pure water immediately after the sea bath.

For Tired Nerves.

A nerve specialist advises the use of a bath spray daily to play upon the length of the spine. The force is directed up and down the spine rather briskly for about five minutes and is made especially strong at the waist line to relieve the pressure of corsets and start the blood to circulating.

Use warm water first, gradually making it colder. This prevents shock and soothes the nervous system.

Rest Treatment.

When one comes in tired the haggard lines can be speedily rested and the tensions loosened by spraying the face and throat vigorously for five minutes. This can be done without disrobing if a rubber sheet is slipped over the head. Use first warm water, then cold, alternately, until the skin is in a glow.

CANADIANS SPOKE IN NO UNCERTAIN WAY—RECIPROCITY IS NOT TO BE DESIRED

The country has spoken in no uncertain way. Borden is premier of Canada and Laurier, after a lifelong service to the country has met overwhelming defeat. With the result of the polls, it was clearly evident that Canada was not in favor of reciprocity. The East showed its dissent by tremendous majorities for Bordon, while the West practically held its own. It was a fight between the East and the West. The moneyed interests were at stake with the passing of the agreement, the farmers of the country and the West would stand to gain. The interests of the East and the West were widely divergent. They asserted what they desired and with a voice that sounded from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Even with such a result, it is still maintained that an entirely wrong thing was done in appealing to the country on party lines so to speak. If the appeal had been made and in the form of a referendum, so that party ties would not have been sacrificed, it is difficult to say what the result would have been, although with such disfavor to the appeal as was shown on Thursday last would indicate that reciprocity would not have stood much chance of passing in the East. Borden is now confronted with this situation. He cannot appeal to the country on an issue, conforming with that just fought. On the other hand, it is thought that the time is not far distant, when Canada will have reciprocity but not with such sweeping reductions as proposed in the Fielding-Taft pact. It is also reasonable to suppose that with the election of the Democratic power in the United States certain reductions will be made by that country, thus accomplishing in a way what reciprocity has advocated. If such is done, Canada will stand to win, without giving much in return, as was contended from the start, by Borden and his followers.

It is to be regretted that certain members of the cabinet met defeat. Paterson and Fielding, the two men who journeyed to Washington to draw up the agreement were defeated in their constituencies. On the other hand, Borden in his home seat of Halifax was returned with a small majority.

Canada has no reason to fear Bourassa. Borden can very well move without him. He will by no means hold the balance of power with such a few followers. The results from thirteen Nationalists in Quebec show explicitly that Nationalism is not to be desired by even those, who were conceded to be strongly in favor of it. Bourassa of all men was to be feared. He sought by every manner of means to assert his doctrines and lead the French Canadians of Quebec from the ruling majority. It is clearly evident that Borden was elected without the assistance of Bourassa and this is certainly very commendable. Bourassa has met crushing defeat.

It is argued and there is ample justification for the supposition that Canada will be at a standstill until the forces of Bordon get established properly. The country will no doubt face a serious situation for the next year. Methods, systems and routines will be exactly reversed. The work of tearing down and building up will begin. Canada will be affected but to what degree is uncertain.

The outcome throughout Canada was precisely what was expected. It was typical of many surprises to both Liberals and Conservatives alike.

TAFT DISAPPOINTED

Now that reciprocity has been turned down in Canada, how will it be received by the American people? What will Taft consider his chances for re-election worth? From the start, he has played a double hand in regard to all matters, pertaining to tariff reductions, deserting the republicans and leaning in his views towards the opposing party. On the evening of September 21st., he expressed his great regret of the result in, the following manner. "For me it is a great disappointment. I had hoped that it would go through to prove the correctness of my judgement that it would be a good thing for both countries. It takes two to make a bargain and if Canada declines we can still go on doing business at the old stand."

The liberal majority has been greatly reduced in the town as compared to that at the last federal elections in 1908, when an overwhelming majority was given for Dr. McIntyre. The majority on Thursday was reduced to 38, with 245 votes cast.

Sir Frederick Borden, Minister of the Militia, was defeated in Kings, N. S. by a young college student, 21 years of age, A. D. Foster. Mr. Foster was attending Dalhousie University last year. Hon. Sidney Fisher, Minister of Agriculture, was defeated by a young lawyer, who had barely attained the age of manhood.

A PREDICTION

On the evening before the election, Mr. Alex Stuart, K. C. from Edmonton, spoke in the Auditorium in the interests of James M. Douglas, the successful candidate on the following day. Mr. Stuart's speech was characterized by his splendid knowledge of the history of reciprocity and the great benefits that the country would derive from its ratification. He also dealt to some length with the theory of free trade as bearing on the forthcoming election. On the whole, his speech was an able one. P. E. Ross, who acted as Chairman of the meeting, gave a brief address and in closing said,—"In 1896, I predicted the defeat of the conservative government and tonight on the eve of one of the greatest elections the country has ever witnessed, I am confident that Laurier and his government will be returned to Ottawa with increased majorities."

Campbell went down to defeat in Strathcona with a large majority by Douglas, the reciprocity candidate. The town of Strathcona, which has always been considered a liberal stronghold, reduced Day's majority at the last election from 200 to 90.

There is little doubt but that Alberta will retain the cabinet member, representing the Department of the Interior, when parliament convenes. R. B. Bennet, who made such a successful showing in Calgary, is looked upon as the successor of Hon. Frank Oliver.

The sooner that Hon. R. L. Borden denounces his connection with Borassa, the sooner will the confidence of the country be strengthened.

After the federal elections come the local option vote sometime during the first week of November. Both the licensed victuallers and the supporters of local option are lining up in preparation of the impending struggle.

With the return to power of Borden and his administration, the West can look forward to the early construction of the Hudsons Bay Railway, the chilled meat industry, terminal elevators, reductions in the freight rates of the prevailing lines of railway in Canada, civil service reform and a score of other innovations too numerous too mention.

Several farmers of the district announce that they will ship their grain by carload lots this fall, arrangements for which have already been completed. According to this, the crop has turned out a great deal better than some of the pessimistic ones would have us believe.

Thursday, October 5th. is the date set for the vote on the several by-laws, providing for improvements in the town. This is the re-vote on these by-laws an explanation for which appears in other columns.

BEARING DOWN PAINS

What woman at sometime or other does not exderience these dreadful bearing down pains. Mrs. E. Griffith, of Main Street Hepworth, Ont., says:—"A heavy bearing-down pain had settled across my back and sides. I was often unable to stoop or straighten myself up. Many times each night I would have to leave my bed with the irregular and frequent secretions of the kidneys and just as done out in the morning as on retiring. I was languid and would have to let my housework stand. Nothing I had tried would benefit me. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and concluded I would try them, which I did, and soon found the long sought relief. My back strengthened and I began to feel better and stronger. I now enjoy my sleep without being disturbed and feel grateful to Booth's Kidney Pills for what they did for me."

The Reason

"How effusively sweet that Mrs. Blondey is to you, Jonesey," said Witherell. "What's up? Any tender little romance there?"

"No, indeed; why that woman hates me," said Jonesey.

"She doesn't show it," said Witherell.

"No, but she knows I know how old she is—we were both born on the same day," said Jonesey, "and she's afraid I'll tell somebody."—Harper's Weekly.

Faultless in Preparation.—Unlike any other stomach regulator, Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of long study of vegetable compounds calculated to stimulate the stomachic functions and maintain them at the normal condition. Years of use have proved their faultless character and established their excellent reputation. And this reputation they have maintained for years and will continue to maintain, for these pills must always stand at the head of the list of standard preparations.

I was telling a friend once how much I was wishing for a child shortly after my marriage, and, like the queen in the fairy story, I pictured the baby to look just so, and it had to have brown eyes. "And just think," I continued, "here I have two children with blue eyes." My little girl, then 4 years old, looked at me sadly, and said: "Mother, I really couldn't help it."

WHAT CAN I DO FOR MY SKIN-TORTURED BABY?

Is the Despairing Cry of Thousands of Mothers. A Scotchwoman Tells How Her Child was Cured.

"What can I do for my skin-tortured baby?" How many worried, worn-out mothers, whose children are suffering with eczema, tetter or other torturing, disfiguring humor, have asked themselves this question! Through neglect or improper treatment, some minor eruption has developed into a distressing and unsightly affliction. Simple treatments fail, and stronger ones are tried, sometimes so harsh that the suffering is increased rather than allayed. Even professional aid has proven useless, and the fear is ever-present that the skin disease will become chronic, turning the child's future into a nightmare of physical and mental misery.

Such mothers, who have witnessed their children's suffering and who have undergone the long, sleepless nights and distracting anxiety which they alone can realize, will understand the gratitude that prompted this letter from Mrs John Ewan, 5 Victoria St., Inverurie, Scotland, and will read it with keenest interest:

"I use Cuticura Soap steadily for my baby's skin. She had the eczema when she was three months old. She was in an awful mess all over her body. We never thought she would get over it. We sat with her night and day for about a month, expecting every minute to see her die. The doctor gave me an ointment to rub her with but it did her no good. My mother was home from America and she told me to try Cuticura Ointment and to wash her with Cuticura Soap. There was a great difference when I used the first box. It seemed to soothe her and she slept. I used three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and she was quite cured. She has the purest skin and is the fattest baby now! She is a miracle, the doctor declares. I am glad to tell anybody about it."

And that the success of the Cuticura Remedies is not confined to the treatment of eczema, is amply proven by Mrs. M. A. Schwerin, 674 Springwells Ave., Detroit, Mich., who writes:

"When my little Vivian was about six months old, her papa had a boil on his forehead. At that time the child was covered with prickly heat and I suppose in scratching it her own head became infected, for it broke out in boils, one after another. She had about sixty in all and I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment which cured her of them entirely. We do not think any one can praise Cuticura Remedies too highly."

That mothers may test the efficacy and economy of the Cuticura Remedies for themselves, the Potter Drug and Chem. Corp., 121 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass., will send free on application, a generous trial box of Cuticura Ointment, sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of eczemas, rashes, itchings and scalings of the skin and scalp. Under the influence of Cuticura Ointment, the itching and burning stop, the child falls into a refreshing sleep, the mother rests, and for the first time, perhaps, in many weeks, peace falls on a distracted household. The Cuticura Remedies are sold by druggists everywhere.

A CURIOUS STORY.

Snake That Bit a Cow Was Outlined In Cream.

There is said to exist in Devonshire a tradition to the effect that if a cow has been bitten by a snake, her milk be allowed to stand, the form of the snake will be seen in the milk. Five persons who live at Goldburn, near Okehampton, and a veterinary surgeon in the district affirm that they have seen such a strange sight. The cow in this case belongs to Mrs. Heale, of Goldburn. It was found on evening to be suffering from an enormous swelling of the udder, and the conclusion was at once drawn that it had been bitten probably by a viper. A correspondent of The Western Daily Mercury adds that the cow was milked and the milk was about to be flung away when the servant girl interposed, and, speaking from previous experience, said, "Let it stand, because if the cow has been bitten by a snake it will show up in the milk."

"The milk was accordingly set aside," the correspondent states, "and on looking at it some three hours afterwards the form of a snake was distinctly seen in the cream which had collected on the surface. There was an exact model of the reptile; the head, with the V mark, the eyes, and the tongue projecting from the mouth—perfect throughout to the tail. Moreover, by the aid of a magnifying glass the scales of the skin could be distinctly seen. All this was seen by Mrs. Heale, her two grown-up daughters, the servant girl, and the boy groom. On the following morning the figure was less distinct. A moth had got into the cream and destroyed the continuity of the tail. Still the figure was traceable, and the attention of the veterinary surgeon was called to it. He admitted that the form of a snake was undoubtedly there. His treatment of the animal from the first was for snake bite."

Peer's Quaint Outlook.

Lord Crewe, who has recently become a marquis, was voted the handsomest man at the coronation. Once, on being asked of what he was proudest, his reply was, "Of being Lord Houghton's son."

He never tires of repeating his late father's witticisms, or of telling of his quaint outlook on life. Lord Houghton loved to introduce the most notorious people to society, and on one occasion when somebody asked if a certain murderer had been executed, Lady Houghton, who was present, replied, "I sincerely hope so, or Richard (Lord Houghton) will be asking him to a breakfast party."

Lord Crewe is an ardent lover of books, and has inherited much of his father's grace of style in writing. He is a keen sportsman, and when in the country is a well-known figure in the hunting field. It was her smart tongue and ready wit which caused Lord Crewe in the first instance to become captivated by his pretty second wife, who was Lady Peggy Primrose.

There is a considerable difference in the ages of Lord and Lady Crewe, who often refers to the fact that as a little girl of four years she used to sit on her future husband's knee while he and her father, Lord Rosebery, talked politics. In the immediate past the Marchioness of Crewe has entertained handsomely for the Liberal party, and will no doubt do so again.

Churchill Hissed and Cheered.

When their Majesties, on the day following their coronation, made their progress through London, it was noted that Mr. Winston Churchill who, as Home Secretary, with his young and charming wife, drove behind them in the procession, was received with cheers of unmistakable heartiness by the dwellers in the poorer quarters of the vast city. But not less significant was the demonstration of which he was made the object in the West End, where wealth and rank and fashion abide. For when he drove to Trafalgar Square, to await the King and Queen, along Pall Mall—which is often spoken of as "Clubland"—he was vigorously hissed from the various clubs. So hearty, and apparently so spontaneous, was the hostile demonstration that both Mr. and Mrs. Churchill were quite taken aback when their carriage turned into Pall Mall. And it may be mentioned that the ladies at the windows joined their husbands and fathers and brothers and sons in the hooting and hissing. That one of the idols of the populace should be an object of detestation to the aristocracy, though not perhaps an unaccountable, is nevertheless a disquieting, and even a dangerous, symptom of English social life.

Gay Birds of the Olden Time.

Extravagance in dress prevailed in the reign of Edward III., who ascended the English throne early in the year 1327.

Men then wore silk hoods, particolored coats with deep sleeves and narrow waists, short hose, long pointed shoes, bushy beards and tails of hair at the back of their heads.

"The ladies," says a poet of that period, "are like peacocks and magpies." They were attired in turbans or lofty miters, with ribbons floating from them like streamers, tunics half of one color and half of another, and deeply emblazoned zones or belts from the front of which daggers were suspended.

Cricketer for Nearly Sixty Years.

Dr. Edward Grace, said to be the greatest cricketer the world has ever seen, who died recently at his home in Gloucestershire, England, had been actively engaged in the English national game for nearly sixty years. He was the oldest of the Grace brothers, all noted cricketers. So popular was he when he retired that his countrymen gave him a benefit which netted about $30,000.

How Winchester Guns and Cartridges Are Made

As the hunting season will soon be here sportsmen generally are thinking of their hunting outfit. This makes it more opportune to call attention to the repeating rifles, repeating shotguns and ammunition of all kinds manufactured by the Winchester Repeating Arms Company—the largest manufacturers of arms and ammunition in the world—which are justly celebrated for their superiority and reliability. Over two million Winchester guns have been sold during the forty odd years they have been upon the market, and today they are in general use all over the world. Having established such a demand for their guns and ammunition the Winchester Company strive to maintain them by exercising great care in the selection of the materials used, and by employing modern methods and machinery in manufacturing their product. The Winchester Company employ the leading experts in gun and ammunition making, and expend annually a large amount of money in experimental work and in perfecting new and desirable types of guns and ammunition. By means of this experimental work and by an exacting system of tests and inspections embracing every stage of manufacture, from the materials in their rough state to the finished product, the Winchester Company are enabled to keep thoroughly modern in every way and up to a high degree of perfection. As proof of the superiority of Winchester cartridges might be cited the report of the Board of Government Experts who, after a thorough test of various makes, reported officially that Winchester rifle cartridges were superior to all others. This is the second year that Winchester cartridges have been so honored. Notwithstanding their superiority and the care taken in manufacturing Winchester guns and ammunition, they cost the consumer no more than inferior makes. Quality considered, Winchester goods are the cheapest upon the market. Winchester goods are sold by most all reputable dealers in hardware and sporting goods.

A TERRIBLE RECORD OF CHILDREN'S DEATHS

As every mother knows, the death rate of little ones in Canada during the hot summer months far exceeds that of any other season of the year. The reason for this is that the excessive heat brings on those dreaded troubles, cholera infantum, diarrhoea, dysentery and other stomach and bowel complaints. These come on so quickly and with such little warning that often baby is beyond help before the mother realizes he is ill. During the hot summer months the mother must be continually on her guard to see that baby's bowels are working regularly and his little stomach is kept sweet and pure. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in the home, as they are the mother's greatest friend. A dose now and then will prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly they will be quickly banished by the Tablets. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

My grandmother was rocking 3½-year-old cousin Catherine to sleep and at the same time telling her a fairy story. She came to the part where "the fairy had yellow eyes ——" when Catherine, whom we thought asleep, or almost, suddenly sat up and exclaimed: "O, grandma, was her name Pussy Cat?"

Beranger's Inspiration.

Beranger is best known for his bacchanalian songs. One night he was at supper with Dumas the elder. The younger Dumas, who was present was passing through his college course and at that period was exhibiting those characteristics which unfortunately developed later in life.

Noticing that Beranger had drunk only water, he somewhat indiscreetly asked: "Where do you obtain, M. Beranger, all the wine which we find in your songs?"

The poet's reply was: "From the fountain in the corner, my boy, and you would do well to make that the source of your inspiration."—London Globe.

Impurities of the Blood Counteracted.—Impurities in the blood come from defects in the action of the liver. They are revealed by pimples and unsightly blotches on the skin. They must be treated inwardly, and for this purpose there is no more effective compound to be used than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. They act directly on the liver and by setting up healthy processes have a beneficial effect upon the blood, so that impurities are eliminated.

The Friendship of Books.

To fall in love with a good book is one of the greatest events that can befall us. It is to have a new influence pouring itself into our life, a new teacher to inspire us, a new friend to be by our side always, who, when life grows narrow and weary, will take us into his wider and calmer and higher world. Whether it be biography, introducing us to some humble life made great by duty done; or history, opening vistas into the movements and destinies of nations that have passed away; or poetry, making music of all the common things around us, and filling the fields and the skies and the work of the city and the cottage with eternal meaning,—whether it be these, or story-books, or religious books, or science, no one can become the friend even of one good book without being made wiser and better.—Henry Drummond.

Montreal.—Miss Irene Jolly, Principal of the Institute Stenographique de France has taken an action against La Presse for the amount of $475 with interest and costs. The newspaper organized in January last a subscription contest in which a trip to Europe was granted to the winner of each district. Miss Jolly claims to have a majority of 1,919,200 votes, and alleges that another young lady had been illegally elected the winner of her district.

"Was her marriage a success?"
"Really, I don't know what alimony she got."

"WE WANT LESS!"

Some Very Peculiar Strikes—Demands For Less Pay Not Unknown.

Among the multitudinous strikes at present in the air, one looks in vain for anything so Gilbertian as demands for lower wages. Indeed, there is something so "strikingly" novel about the suggestion that its emanation from Colney Hatch does not appear improbable.

Yet the thing is an actual industrial fact. Strikes for less pay, though very, very rare, are not unknown.

One occurred in Leicester no longer ago than 1884. In that year the hand-frame sockmakers at Oadby, a village near Leicester, in order to get work which otherwise would have gone to the bigger centre, petitioned to be allowed to work for 7 1-2 per cent. less wages than were current in Leicester. Upon hearing of this, the Leicester men promptly informed their employers that if they would not send orders to Oadby they would do the work at a 5 per cent. reduction in pay.

Which seemingly advantageous offer the masters declined. Whereupon notices were handed in, and, determined to have lower wages, the hapless hosiery men struck for them!

But this is mild—almost modest—compared to an outrageous demand once made by the miners of Northumberland and Durham. These toilers—80,000 of them — begged that they should not be compelled to earn more than three shillings a day! To which prayer their employers wouldn't listen. So the men came out on strike, stayed out for twenty weeks, endured hardships of the most terrible description, and then went back hopelessly beaten.

To-day another strike is threatening this same district; but there is a very great contrast in the causes of dispute.

At the date of the historic strike above-mentioned — 1844 — the fathers and grandfathers of these men toiled ten and eleven hours daily, and earned on an average twelve shillings per week. To-day there are hundreds of hewers in both counties who make as much in six or eight hours.

But if their earnings were so small, why should the miners of 1844 have demanded a maximum—not minimum—wage of three shillings a day? Well, then, as now, the work was done "on piece," and the idea was, when a man had earned three shillings, in no matter how short a time—that man was to be free to cease work for that day if he chose. By this means the men calculated that the output would be restricted, and the work and wages made to "go round." Whether or not the argument was sound, or the request reasonable, is immaterial. The masters said "No," and stuck to it through a twenty weeks' strike.

Not all employers, however, are adamant on offers of "deductions." Four years ago the workers in a mat factory at Glemsford, in Suffolk, all received three months' notice, whereupon, in order to keep the place going, the hands voluntarily offered to work for an all-round 10 per cent. reduction in wages. To decide the matter the owners proposed a ballot. Each worker was given a pea and a bean, the latter to represent a "vote" for reduced pay, and the former against.

Seventy-five beans and nineteen peas were put into the "ballot-box"—a jam-pot, by the way—so by a handsome majority the successful party made sure of the desired deduction.—London Answers.

"Determination" For Dinner.

In her book, "The Suffragette," Miss E. Sylvia Pankhurst tells this incident of a "hunger strike" by one of the "militants": "On being denied treatment as a political offender Miss Dunlop warned the governor of the prison that she should refuse to eat anything until she had gained her point. Though not possessed of the vigor and reserve force that belong to youth and of a fragile constitution, Miss Dunlop went cheerfully at her task.

"When she refused the ordinary prison fare, dainty food was placed in her cell and left there day and night. But if the temptation to touch it existed she was delivered therefrom. 'What are you going to have for dinner to-day?' the doctor would ask. 'My determination,' she would reply. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday passed.

"By Friday it was evident she would carry the hunger strike even to the gates of death. So on Friday evening she was set free. The fourteen women who had been sentenced the day of her release decided to follow her example."

Dummy Royal Address.

A curious slip in the arrangements for the King's visit to Wales has just come to light.

The address which was presented to His Majesty on behalf of Montgomeryshire County Council was a dummy, consisting of some parchment tied up with ribbon.

The County Council had had prepared an ornate illuminated expression of welcome and of pleasure at the objects of Their Majesties' visits to Wales.

The clerk had charge of the address, but his luggage miscarried on the journey from Carnarvon to Machynlleth.

His Majesty was promptly notified of the incident, and some parchment was secured, enclosed in the most appropriate case that could be found, and, tied around with ribbon, was presented as the real address.

Queer Looking Worms.

New Zealand and Australia are the homes of various species of worms with thick, heavy bodies and with a well defined neck connecting the body with a head that is a startling reminder of that of the monkey. In the Sandwich Islands they are called me-ta-lu-ki, which means "creeper with a child's head." An old New Zealand legend says that at one time they were of immense proportions and threatened the extinction of all human life on the islands.

SCOTS WHA HAE.

What the Man Frae the Hielans Has Accomplished In Canada.

According to the census figures, Scotland is being depopulated, or, at all events, it is ceasing to grow at the rate it should.

But this depopulation is no new thing. And there is another side to the question, a side which is far from unpleasant; for what is Britain's loss is the Empire's gain.

In the making of every British colony the Scot has played a part, and a book which has been recently published — "Scots in Canada," by J. Murray Gibbon—shows how much our great Dominion beyond the seas owes to the pluck, energy, and colonizing instinct of the man from the North.

There were Scots in Canada so long ago as 1621, when Sir William Alexander secured a charter granting him the territory, roughly covered now by Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but it was the exodus following the rebellion of 1745 that was the starting point in Canada's history.

Then a Greenock merchant, John Pagan, obtained a grant of land at Pictou, and he offered, as an inducement to come out to Canada, a free passage, a farm lot, and a year's provisions.

"He owned an old Dutch brig, which he called the Hector, and in the Hector he shipped out in July, 1773, his first colonists from the Highlands, 189 souls in all. . . . The ground was still uncleared, but they struggled through the first hard years, and prospered. Three years later they were joined by other Scots from Prince Edward Island, who had emigrated from Dumfries, but had been eaten out by locusts."

After this the Scots stream was constant, whole families arriving. When the first hardships were over, these early pioneers wrote to their relatives in Scotland to come out and join them. The so-called Highland Clearances brought others—no fewer than 1,309 arriving in a single season in 1803. Fresh settlements sprang up; some cast in their lot with the fur traders; others struck out and fought their way to uncleared but fertile parts.

Hearing the story of these strenuous times from one of the veterans, a Scotch officer expressed his admiration, saying:

"The only instance I know that I can compare it to is that of Moses leading the Children of Israel into their Promised Land."

Up jumped the old man.

"Moses!" said he. "Compare me to Moses! Moses be hanged! He lost half his army in the Red Sea, and I brought my party through without losing one man!"

It was men of this spirit who founded the great Northwest Company, which, by the end of the 19th century, had an annual turnover of $600,000, employed fifty clerks, seventy-one interpreters and clerks, 1,120 canoemen, and thirty-five guides. Practically all the proprietors were Scots.

And the Hudson Bay Co. gradually became Scotch. From the time when the inevitable Scot appears upon the scene to the present day, the chief proportion of the Hudson Bay officials have been drawn from the Orkneys and the Highlands.

Why the country still makes it call to the Scot is shown in the story of the farmer who said that "it made a chap's eyes glad to look at wheat 70 inches high with such a head on it. And ye dinna grow tatties like you in Banchory-Devenick. If they saw me owning soil like yon in Aberdeen they'd a' tak' their hats aff to me."

What is the secret of the Scots' success in Canada? The author explains it thus:

"They were able to adapt themselves to any circumstances; they had faith in themselves, and stuck together. In Canada to-day there are close upon a million citizens of Scots descent or birth. They are only one-eighth of the total population, but they hold among them more than one-half of the positions worth having. The best passport for any immigrant into Canada is to speak with a Scotch accent. One occasionally sees the notice in connection with some situation—"No English need apply." If any Canadian had the temerity to say "No Scots need apply," he would not only advertise himself a fool, but he would also probably be lynched."—London Answers.

Iron Ore In Vancouver Island.

Reports come from British Columbia that immense deposits of high grade iron ore have been discovered in the vicinity of Upper Quinsam Lake, in the Comox district of Vancouver Island, and at Upper Campbell Lake, a few miles away. American capitalists are said to have secured control of these deposits. Fortunately as there is no coal along the Pacific coast of the United States it is hardly probable that this ore will be taken out of Canada for smelting. A very long railway haul would be required to transport this iron ore to any point in the United States where cheap fuel is available for smelting purposes, whereas in Vancouver Island there are great areas of coal within a few miles of the iron ore.—Canadian Century.

Farmer Politicians.

Every member of a group of Parliamentarians who were sitting round the table of the House of Commons cafe a few days ago put forward a claim to be considered a farmer. All of them got away with it nicely except Honore Gervais, one of Montreal's representatives in the House.

"Mr. Gervais, did you ever learn to milk a cow?" asked Roderick Mackenzie, secretary of the Grain Growers' Association.

Before Mr. Gervais could answer, C. H. Lovell, the member for Stanstead, said in his well-known deep base voice, "What's that go to do with it? Any calf can milk a cow."—Courier.

Accepting the Inevitable.

Wonderful are the Hindus for accepting the inevitable. Tell one of these that he must take castor oil, and he will drain the oleaginous cup to the dregs and smack his lips. Tell him that his leg must be amputated, and he will present the limb for dismemberment and smile as he sees it severed. Tell him that he is to be hanged, and with no touch of emotion whatever he will reply, "Jo hookum" ("whatever is ordered"), just as if he had been told that he must have his corns cut.—Blackwood's Magazine.

VALUE OF AN INDUSTRY

Its Great Monetary Worth to the Community Where It Is Located

An interesting and accurate calculation has been made of what an industry employing 1,000 hands means to a community:

It increases the population by 5,000 consumers.

It adds $90,000 to the value of public utilities.

The assessment is increased by $400,000.

It pays out annually in salaries and wages $559,800.

It represents through its buildings and the houses of its employees an investment of $2,000,000.

The annual expenditure in food would be $63,000 in meat, $9,600 in potatoes, $5,000 in sugar, $18,250 in milk, $65,700 in butter, and $27,600 in eggs.

Summed up, this means that an industry employing 1,000 hands is worth $221,600 a year to the farmers of the district.

The expenditure in clothing would be $168,750.

With the annual payment of taxes added to the total expenditure on buildings, food and clothing, you have in all $2,428,350 turned into the town in one year throught the coming of one great industry. In conclusion, one may again note the prodigious results which are effected by the presence in Canada of some 435,000 artisans. In round figures these men would mean at least $1,056,322,250 to the Dominion.

An industry employing 1,000 hands may be regarded as a large one, but the same percentage of results would follow in larger or smaller plants, so that one can easily begin to reckon for himself what any particular industry would mean to a town or city.

ECONOMY IN FEEDING.

Good pasture is sweet and fragrant. These qualities are deficient in dry foods, and they are essential to ensure thorough assimilation and prevent waste of food. Food not fully assimilated sooner or later impairs the health. During about twenty-five years Herbageum has without failure, efficiently and economically replaced those essential qualities, and its regular use with all classes of animals is advised. The cost per month for each horse, cow, beeve, hog, or for about twenty fowls is not over 15c, and for sheep and calves not over 5c per month each. It is manufactured by the Beaver Manufacturing Company, Limited, of Galt, Ontario.
